Do You Remember the Color Blue?: The Questions Children Ask About Blindness Sally Hobart Alexander

Blindness is a fascinating mystery to children. Sally Hobart Alexander lost her sight at the age of twenty-six, and although the experience was devastating, eventually her life changed in positive ways she never expected. In Do You Remember the Color Blue? Sally answers thirteen thought-provoking questions that children have asked her over the years about being blind. Each one addresses a different aspect of her experience, from coping with her loss and dealing with people who don't know how to treat a blind person to marrying a man she couldn't see and being a blind mom.

Illustrated with snapshots from Sally's life, and photographs of interesting gadgets, Do You Remember the Color Blue? is a candid conversation that will change children's ideas about what it means to be blind.
