Sherlock Holmes At the Raffles Hotel John Hall

London, 1905.

After the death of his second wife, and with patient numbers falling, Doctor Watson is considering retirement.

That is, until he gets an urgent telegram from Martha, the housekeeper of an old friend.

Sherlock Holmes is ill. Watson must make his way to his cottage in the village of Fullworth as soon as possible.

But he arrives to find Holmes alive and well, if a little melancholy. The telegram was a clever ploy by Martha to return Holmes to his former vigour.

In the village, Arshak Sarkies suggests a holiday for the pair as his guests at the Raffles Hotel in Singapore – it should be just what the doctor ordered. But knowing Holmes, they will only be able to tempt him abroad with the promise of one last case...

When they finally arrive at the hotel, it seems that Watson's scheme has come true after all.

The wealthy wife of a hotel resident, Mr Derek Masterton, has been found dead in her apartment, her 'Singapore Sugarplum' sweets laced with arsenic.

With her money protected by a will, who would have the motive to kill Mrs Masterton?

How could they have gotten so close, and have predicted her every move?

And what of the strange goings-on reported by the butler?

Thrown back into the investigating game, Holmes and Watson must use all their deductive powers to solve the case of the poisoned sugarplums.

'Sherlock Holmes at the Raffles Hotel' is a brilliant addition to the Holmes and Watson casebooks.

'A treat for any Holmes fan'. - Robert Foster, best-selling author of 'The Lunar Code'.

John Hall spent many years in the civil service before becoming a professional writer specialising in crime fiction. His book 'Death of a Collector' won the Sherlock magazine's competition for the best new fictional detective.
